Aye, and a headlock, too, I trow. Look you Across the Appian Way and there perceive In weighty conference—nursing their cars—Good Doctor Rollero and, eke, Zbyszko; One has a gun, the other wears a sword, While in his pocket there is powdered glass; I fain do believe they're seeking to waylay A brother wrestler. Who could'st it be?

Think you of Strangler Lewis? FIRST CITIZEN:

Enter Dr. Rollero and Wladek Zbyszka.
DR. ROLLERO:

ROLLERO:
Has't seen a scullion straight from Hell itself?
A hulking brute with eyes black as Othello's,
With biceps bulging like red toy balloons,
All hair streaked like an African gorilla,
Who calls himself Ed, Strangler Lewis?—
A thousand areas on his property. thousand curses on his progeny

ZBYSZKO: Aye, and more! FIRST CITIZEN:

I have not seen the gent. SECOND CITIZEN:

the headlock yahoo? DR. ROLLERO:

The same. Perceive how noble Wladek weeps And slashes at the air with his good blade, Unmindful of the fact, that should he chip Himself upon the ear, around the corner They'd serve cauliflower au gratin; or, perchance, They'd dub it Wrestling Stew. He weeps because Three nights ago a foul incident, Unspeakable, save in the inky black

Of hideous night, befell his bright career-FIRST CITIZEN: Did some one give him work? SECOND CITIZEN:

DR. ROLLERO:

Nay, it was even worse than that, good sirs!
He wrestled Strangler for the slettertli
And plaudits of the Roman populace,
Under the auspices of Signor Curley.
Methinks that he did well when suddenly,
This scullion from the nether sweeps of Hell, Beset him with his head locking device And bore him to the mat perforcedly. He rubbed his nose upon the canvas there Sawed off his ears and kicked them off the stage, Poked out his eyes and laid them on the mat And, otherwise, made him look like a bum! Oh, infamy and crime upon its crest! Think you, kind sirs, how noble Wladek felt, Picture the multiform embarrassment Of this, a sensitive soul, jammed to the floor. Pinned there in durance vile by a headlock! Noble Wladek would tell to you, himself, Just how he felt, except he speaks no English

And I, who suffered from a similar dose

Am speaking for him. FIRST CITIZEN: The headlock is a pip! SECOND CITIZEN:

You're Wilbur Wright it is! DR. ROLLERO: Avaunt! Begone! Vile wretches without heart, Who have no sympathy to understand. Away! Away! And now I do me believe It was your voices from the gallery
That bellowed forth in harsh orthopy.
As, I myself, lay prone upon the floor.
My head encased within the Strangler's lock:
"Saw off the sucker's dome; he doesn't need it!"

Flee for your lives, I say, the both of you, Ere Wladek and myself go mad and slew.

TWO CITIZENS (Exiting):

To lose his head would leave a wrestler flat, He'd have no place to check his winter's hat.

"I'm not making any threats," said Alexander, "but I think the public should know the situation. Seven years ago Philadelphia paid $750 for me. They sold me for $50,000. Hard work brought about the boom in my stock, and the man who did the work ought to get some of it."

Alexander said he expected to leave for his home at St. Paul, Neb. tonight. He has not yet signed a contract with Chicago.
